After reading this AMs forecast I may have some more information on the AMu reported near Cooke. We were up on the Henderson bench and saw what could have been a crown from a distance. Hard enough to tell if it was an avalanche or sled track that I didn't report it. SW aspect of sheep mountain around 9800 ft, on the R as you drive up to Lulu. Seems possible this could have been it? Not a lot of S aspects or bigger terrain 1/4 mile N of Huckleberry... I would estimate D2 depth 30-60 cm. Crappy photo attached, potential crown marked.
